The text discusses the UNESCO recognition of Austrian pastries as intangible cultural heritage. It mentions that the UNESCO Commission accepted the "Good Practice Examples for the Preservation and Transfer of the Intangible Cultural Heritage" submitted by the "Friends of Austrian Pastry Culture", led by Alfred Fiedler, during a press conference in Linz. The article also notes that the initiative was founded in Upper Austria with the goal of protecting valuable buildings, natural monuments, and traditional crafts like pastries. A section titled "Von Fachbeirat ausgewählt" (Selected by expert committee) states that in July, ten particularly successful projects from Austria were accepted into the UNESCO register. The article concludes with a quote from Landeshaupmann Thomas Stelzer (ÖVP) expressing pride in Austria's pastries being recognized as a "world class".
